Forex can put in some awesome movies and is one of the best vehicles to trade to take advantage of the trend. Why is that? This is because of the leverage. This is also because of the price behavior in Forex and that for Forex tends to obey technical indicators and numerical ratios very well.

Leveraging for riding Forex trends depend on what type of brokerage account have. Of course if you're in the USA you currently have half the margin power, but really, who cares - it still much more leverage than the currency future equivalent. But that's plenty! You don't want to over leverage or at least get in the habit of doing so.

Also, compared to options trading, you don't have any time or premium decay! That's awesome so you can ride a leveraged instrument with no time decay - a beautiful thing.

You know that the big players, the guys with the big money usually go for the big trends right? Why not copy them?! The thing about trading trends is that it's not very stressful and that you don't have to worry about rapidly responding to getting in and out and it out all the time. Plus playing a trend is not hey market competitive thing. And remember all that counts is that you make money and grow your trading account. Sometimes trading too frequently is counterproductive therefore trend trading can't benefit most out there.

If you increase your time frame outlook for trading you could potentially make a lot more money vs. hyperactive trading trying to capture every little move. Plus, why work so hard?!
